FAREWELL RECEPTION.

The class of 1904 of Illinois college was royally entertained Saturday evening by its president, Mr. Melville T. Kennedy at his home on West Grove street. The affair was given as a farewell reception to the class officers, Mr. Frank Morrison, and his wife, after a course upon, to which every member did the fullest justice, the president in a short speech presented Professor Morrison with a beautiful set of silver mounted ebony brushes, a token of the class esteem. The professor, though too full for words, responded in his quiet way and gave assurance that the friendships he had so closely formed would never be forgotten. The remainder of the evening was spent in games and songs and at a late hour the guests departed, boisterously yelling the class yell and wishing their beloved officer continued years of success and happiness.

MINISTERS PROTEST

At a meeting of the Ministers' association Monday morning a resolution was passed protesting against the cemetery ordinance introduced at the last council meeting and calling on Mayor Davis to veto it. The resolution is as follows:

Believing that no class of men are brought in closer connection with the last resting place of the beloved dead than the pastors of the various churches—knowing from special experiences the sacredness and tenderness clustering about these silent homes—feeling that these sacred places cannot be made so beautiful and that it would be impossible to place upon them too much care and attention; and further that a most decided improvement was made in the management a year or more ago and that the cemetery shows great advance in care and beauty; we wish to express with great gratitude our hearty sympathy and belief in the ordinance placing the cemetery under the care of a commission—our protest in the strongest manner possible against the action of the last council meeting in revoking the commission ordinance as regards the management of the cemetery.

We further believe that the last resting place of the dead should be removed as far as possible from any idea that savors of politics and that the non-partisan commission is a strong move in the right direction.

We respectfully request the honorable mayor, who inaugurated the commission ordinance to veto the new ordinance promising him our support in his endeavor to make beautiful and keep sacred the home of our beloved dead.

TIAGEDY AT WHITEHALL

Orlando Johnson Shoots His Sweetheart and Then Suicide.
Whitehall, June 22.—Just before midnight last night Orlando Johnson, aged 22, and his sweetheart, Miss Ruby Dickerson, both of this city, were walking on South Main street when, without any apparent cause, Johnson drew a revolver and shot the girl in the head, the ball entering behind the right ear. He then shot himself through the head and fell dead. The girl died before she had been taken to the hospital. The police are investigating the case.

DIED BY HIS OWN HAND

MACCABEE BROTHERS

out the half physical life changed his attention, he was to work in the scientific and mechanical conditions. He secured his mechanical education, sought pleasure for recreation, clothed simply in delicate courtesy, cultured mind in elegant accomplishments, became enraptured with the surroundings of color, the symmetrical grace of chiseled marble, the stately aspirations of noble architecture and the movement and melody of music.

What he wrought a commerce, sending his white-robed carriers to the farthest shores; a country rich beyond the dreams of avarice; a humanity speeding its Red Cross angels of mercy to remotest fields of battle; a philanthropy registered into the very structure of the state; a college with its doors opening to library arts; a university where each diversified vocation of man finds equipment; a religion whose all-Father loves each member of the human race. He wrought man as properly incarnate. In the museum of his renown let the inscription read: "Humanity called, he answered."

It would be king's folly to call in question the splendor of the nineteenth century man or the glory of his achievements, but it might be wisdom to consider that these civilities of the person and improvements of the mind, arise from the foundations of God, truth and righteousness, laid by the Puritan ancestors of the eighteenth century, and it certainly is king's wisdom to ask how much further we can go in this twentieth century glorifying the material, ignoring the spiritual—pleasures not principles, esthetics not ethics, time not eternity.

Before the very foundations become obliterated and this fair creation reverts to chaos. Remove the foundations and the edifice falls, the more resplendent the superstructure the more deplorable the ruin. If, from the nineteenth century's practical life the mystic of the eighteenth be gone we are even now amid the quaking glories of a tottering civilization. When man's hand is lifted to life, the life of a battle and a march under watchful heaven toward superlative issues and eternal destinies he soon falls into the lap of Delilah and never again can carry away the gates of Canaan. Culture, so the world makes the age effeminate, luxurious and degenerate. Age accumulations, though towering to the hundred billion mark, with conscience in every particular of the amazing, stand for the bowdlerizing torch of agrarian passion. A glorious state, without riches and truth for her throne, though unceasingly gold pours into her treasury and the flags of all her statesmen and her warriors, in every sea, in gorgeous voluptuousness sink into the realms of memory and regret, and as a tale is told to be numbered with garden-terrace Babylon the beautiful and hundred-gated Thebes the magnificent.

But combine the mystic Puritan of the eighteenth century with the practical Puritan of the nineteenth, incorporate the spirit of the one into the life of the other, and the future of the nation looks for the twentieth century of ours, then the moral life of the nation will equal its physical might and the eternal years of God are ours.

What the cry of eternity into the ears of time? "Wanted, the twentieth century Puritan." One who in the midst of life so full of grace and beauty and wealth which art and nature and industry have showered upon us will glorify all with conscience from the throne, realizing that all the brightness of life but reflects the beauty of infinite mind, tinting the seashell, tinting the trees, painting it on bread of brick, singing it in song of brook and covering all with the glory of the future to be realized, too, that life is more than beauty and God more than a designer of art; one to whom God is sublime not because "braving the light or launching the lightning" or directing the heavenly arch beyond reach of telescope, but sublime because sovereign of a moral universe whose government is truth; one to whom the laws of nature, the laws of the spirit, of might, and station, and wealth, and the temporalities, but noble as he is conscious of his relation to the eternities, a factor in the spread of the kingdom which is to cover the whole earth. So, first of God, fearless of the future, looks for the absolute dominion of righteousness and truth on earth and ardently desires to do his strenuous part in the accomplishment of that vast purpose. For this, joyfully enduring pleasure when pleasure would allure from immediate duty, with gleaming scorn when ease would entice from the right, glorying in the cross when the cross brings the uplifting of low man, counting not life itself dear when life is given that truth may be returned in his soul is lighted with celestial ambition, his whole being is charged with seraphic inspiration, making the commonest footway radiant, the humblest lot exalted to life in heaven. In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn for miserable aims that end with self. In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars.

AND WITH PERSEVERANCE URGES MAN'S SEARCH

To vaster issues.
Young gentlemen of the senior class: If you severally enter life a twentieth century Puritan, you will want, you must and fit the type type: God calls you. He did Abraham. Come out under His sovereign eye, let truth be the test of thought, right the rule of action, let eternal verities assay your soul, then your path will be of blessing and your goal of peace, then goodness and mercy shall follow you all the days of your life and you shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

THE DEATH RECORD

GOODRICK

At 3:15 Monday James M. Goodrick quietly breathed his last, at his home, South East street, in this city. Mr. Goodrick was born in this city Aug. 21, 1838, and was the oldest of thirteen children of Rev. and Mrs. Joel Goodrick. His early life was spent in this city, where he received the best advantages the place afforded and later he went into the clothing trade with his honored father and remained with it until a few years ago.
